

Tories And Liberals Attract 39 At Joint Election Rally

Even the Joint Election Rally for the Model Parliament seems to have been bitten by the bug of student apathy, or perhaps conventional political haggling no longer interests McGill students.

A Joint Election Rally was held last night in the Union, co-sponsored by the Progressive-Conservative and Liberal clubs of McGill. Although 63 candidates are running for election, a total of 29 students and one Daily reporter were present at the rally.

The first speaker, Stan Hartt, speaking for the Liberal Party, condemned the policy of the Progressive-Conservatives who are "for anything that doesn't cost money and will get votes." He compared Diefenbaker and the Conservatives to the Communists who "continually make promises without fulfilling them." Hartt's speech met with much heckling and heated discussion.

by Grace Aronoff

Peter Millard, representing the Conservatives, stated that the Liberals did not take advantage of Canada's "real possibilities" and that by their "stagnant policy" Canada was run as if it were "a rest home for old ladies". He claimed that our country's natural resources should have been developed instead of the Liberals "sitting back and resting on their big fat majority".

Tax Increase

"The Liberals propose to increase taxes", declared Brahm Campbell, a Liberal candidate. "If you want progress, you must pay." He continued to outline the Liberal policy — a general education plan whereby a fund will be established to grant sums to provincial ministers of education.

Holly Higgins, a Progressive-Conservative candidate, outlined the Conservative policy with regard to social security, advocating increases in old-age pensions, veterans' and family allowances, and a hospital insurance plan to cover all types of illness.

The last Liberal speaker, Morris Fish, accused Diefenbaker of disregarding the rights of Parliament by advising the public of the legislature without first consulting parliament, and by forming a system of continental defense without informing the people.

The rally was concluded by the leader of the Progressive-Conservatives, Bob Amaron, who reviewed his party's policy and stressed the P.C.'s long-range view as opposed to the Liberals whose tight money policy "shut out small business".

Before the rally had ended, the attendance had increased by approximately 10 students, who perhaps were attracted to the meeting by the bright placards displayed by the Liberal candidates.

German Professor Lectures On Kafka

"Canadian scholars lack the prestige which the top students receive at Trinity College in Dublin", Dr. H.S. Reiss, in an interview said that he felt that not enough importance was attached to the scholar here, and that social life, while important, was overshadowing the university's prime purpose which is education.

Kafka Lecture

Dr. Reiss, who is the new professor of German at McGill, will lecture at 8:15 pm in Moyse Hall. He will lecture on Kafka and the Modern European Novel, and he has written a book on Kafka, aside from several papers on literature. He also wrote another novel, "Political Thought on German Romantics". This will be Dr. Reiss' first lecture here. There is

Stanley Lectures At Math Society

"The Mathematics of Biology" will be the topic of an address given to the Mathematical Society today by Dr. J. Stanley, Chairman of the Zoology Department at McGill.

Dr. Stanley has done a considerable amount of work in this field and his lecture will deal with the application of mathematics to problems in the biological sciences. All interested students are invited to attend.

Please note that the meeting place of the Mathematical Society has been changed. Today's lecture will take place at 1 pm in room 106 in the P.S.C.

When asked about the role of arts in the university, Dr. Reiss said that no university can possibly exist without the arts. He felt that arts students should get a good background of science courses, and that science students should do the same. While students need some interests, it is imperative that quality not be sacrificed for quantity. It is his hope that the scientist of the future will not be mere technicians but thinking human beings. Humanities, also, should be vigorously pursued in order to further our "intellectual imaginative heritage".

German Is Difficult

Dr. Reiss finds that it is extremely difficult to teach German here as students have never taken it before coming to college. "The mastery of the language," he says, "is essential in order to fully comprehend German literature. Students who first begin German in the university rarely achieve this end".

Exhibition Debate Features M.P.'s Tomorrow Night

The Hon. John W. Pickersgill will speak for Canada's Liberal Party against Arthur Maloney of the Progressive Conservative Party in a debate at McGill University Wednesday night, on the topic "Resolved that the Progressive Conservatives are Canada's only national political party". Dean In Chair

Both Messrs. Pickersgill and Maloney will be supported by a student debater, chosen from among McGill's best. Dean Noel Fieldhouse of the Faculty of Arts and Science will chair the debate, and introduce each of the four speakers.

Mr. Pickersgill was Federal Minister of Citizenship and Immigration in the Liberal Cabinet, a post which he held since July, 1954.

Mr. Maloney was elected to the House of Commons for Toronto-Parkdale in the general election of last June 10.

Ibsen Play Opens In Union Tonight

The Players' Club production of "The Master Builder" opens tonight at 8:45 in the Union Ballroom.

The Ballroom has been realtered for the play which will be presented in arena style, with the stage in the centre and the audience all around. Approximately 250 people will be able to see each performance.

There are three different scenes for each of the play's three acts. These have been constructed in such a manner that the audience's view will not be obstructed from any side of the room.

The main lights are suspended from the ceiling above the "stage" and spotlights have been placed from all four sides to create an even lighting effect.

Teamwork

Although there are few actors in the play, the stage crew and sets staff consists of about fifteen people. Considerable teamwork is necessary for a smooth performance because of the fact that there is no real "backstage".

The play, written by Henrik Ibsen in 1866, will be presented in period costumes designed by Richard Lorain.

Tickets are still available and may be bought in the Union from 12 to 4 pm and in the Arts Building from 12 to 2 pm. The play is directed by Norma Springford and produced by Dick Dibben. Brian Pearce is stage manager.

Leading Roles

Michael Kinsman and Sue Grossman have the leading roles, while Bev Rosen, Bill Armstrong, Judy Laiken, and Geoffrey Cosgrove are also in the cast.

Stern Speaks At 'On Tuesday' Series

Another lecture in the S.C.M.'s "On Tuesday" series will be held today at 5 pm in room c. 104 of the Chemistry Building. The speaker, Dr. Karl Stern, a noted psychologist with Montreal's Institute Prevost will speak on the topic "The Struggle for Man." There will be a discussion period immediately following the lecture.

Jewish Convert

Dr. Stern comes from Germany, and is a Jewish convert to Catholicism. He has written a book on his conversion, entitled "The Pillar of Fire". He has a profound insight into the sociological conditions of Western society and has written a widely received book on the subject entitled "The Third Revolution".

Editorials

Our Duty And Our Detractors

Newspapers have always been the subject of heated controversy and attack from varied interests since the earliest days of the press. College papers, though amongst the lower orders of the fourth estate, are also prone to be the butt of the aroused ire of their readers.

Here at the Daily we have become accustomed to the letter from the shocked parent, the irate growl of the SEC, the injured blast from the executive of a campus event, the frenetic howl of the publicity agent, the dignified disapproval of RVC. In a queer way these are our daily bread and butter, and to each we try at all times to turn an attentive and sympathetic ear.

It is difficult however to operate when there exists a plethora of ideas as to the function of the Daily and its duties. One high executive of the SEC told us recently that the Daily's first duty was not to criticize but to support campus organizations. With this we take exception. We see ourselves as guided by a twofold ideal: to pursue truth and to communicate it to others, and to criticize policy and help formulate public opinion.

Following such a policy will inevitably lead to some unkind words being said about some things; it will also lead to praise, the other side of the coin. The Daily does not believe that any organization should be treated as if it were a sacred cow. In a campus as diffuse as ours, with the very bureaucratic student administrative system that we have, the Daily has a vital function to perform as watchdog for the students interest. We do not have a high-sounding motto in our masthead as many journals do and we do not pretend to match the public press in quality or scope. Nor do we think that we always know the truth.

Within our limited field however we do our best to print the news that's fit to print and to defend the right to the expression of opinion.

The Sweet And Happy Logic Of Deep And Gay Unreason

Sometimes everybody should go crazy. Sometimes everybody must say that the unlyrical way the world is is no good, and that what it needs is more weird and rich insanity. Sometimes the spirit of a chaotic mind must overcome the rationalists and send the arch-academics into paeans of sweet unaccustomed unreason. We are none of us crazy enough in this mad world. When things are at their most insane we pretend to be most sane, and then the folly of sanity becomes most clear. A perverse eye may often have a more fruitful vision than a balanced one. A warped mind may often understand more insightfully some of the warped situations that sane men create. William Blake was called mad in his time; there is an excellent exhibition of some of his "madness" in the Library. There has always been an association between madness and genius; one of the reasons is that we sane people often find it difficult to distinguish between madness and pure inspired creation. We can't see beyond our own narrow logic. If God were a human being we would call him insane, and Christ was crucified.

Sometimes we wonder if a lyric gentle insanity is not a good thing for a man. Perhaps if there were some more whimsical politicians and a few Alice In Wonderland corporation presidents, the serious things in life would be more refreshing. The New York Times, even, would be delightful.

But why should anyone consider even for a moment the efficacy of insanity. There may be good reason. There is more insanity on heaven and earth than we know. Horatio. For what sane man or club or army of sane men could have constructed a world so lush and insipid and grim and gay and tragic and wonderful as the one which cantankerously carries on as we do our best to destroy and preserve it.

Letters To The Editor

Irate Candidate

Sir:

Three days before the deadline for nominating members to the forthcoming Model Parliament, the undersigned handed in his nomination sheet, duly signed by 25 members of his faculty and year, to George at the tuckshop.

When the Independent nominee for Commerce was announced, I did not see my name, whereupon I asked members of the Debating Union executive, "What happened to my nomination?" I was then told that it had not been received. However, the president of the Debating Union informed me that he had received my application, but that another had been received prior to mine (both before the deadline), and so he had chosen the first received nominee as the Independent candidate in Commerce 3 and 4. He did this, sir, without laying both names before a screening committee or the Debating Union executive (as verified by two members of this body), and discussing the respective merits of the candidates.

How can this be recognized as democratic procedure when the nomination of a student is not even considered, even though sanctioned by 25 members of his faculty? Granted that a recognized party holds the right to select its own slate, is it democratic for a single student, representing the Debating Union, and acting independently, to have the power to judge which student has the right to run as an Independent? Would it not be more democratic if an Independent, properly nominated, was screened by his own voters, as shown by their votes, and not by a single student. Surely the voice and the decision of about 250 students should hold more weight than that of a single individual.

If this is to be a model of Canada's democratic and responsible Parliament, — changes will have to be made.

What is this IBM?

IBM is many things. Physically it's International Business Machines Company Limited with a quarter-mile long ultra-modern factory located in the suburbs of Toronto, a group of twenty-one branch offices in the principal cities of Canada, a private golf and country club where employees spend their leisure, and a large group of intelligent men and women who proudly give themselves the strange title of IBMers.

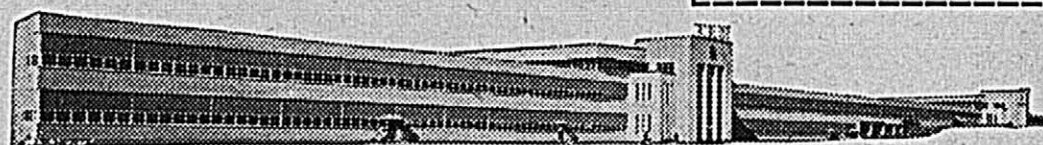

People who work at IBM call themselves IBMers because it's the natural thing to do. And it's the natural thing to do because the company is friendly. It's friendly enough to pay your hospital bills when you're sick, to provide you with a pension plan and up to $25,000 life insurance. But more than that, it encourages you to grow with the ever-expanding business, to advance rapidly and to be able to afford to live in the most attractive areas in your town and, above all, it gives you interesting work to do.

For university graduates this interesting work takes many forms which offer much scope and afford the exercise of individuality and originality. In the coming months I will outline some of the opportunities at IBM that will interest you.

Swimming Crown To London Lasses

The girls from the University of Western Ontario took home the Women's Intercollegiate Swimming Title on Saturday. The London lasses edged out McGill by a score of 47-40. The University of Toronto and Queen's University tied for last place with 27 points. The championships were held in Hart House at the University of Toronto.

McGill's two first places were captured by Rose Rochman and Anne Hamilton. In a very close race, Rose edged out Western's Shirley Moser to win the 50 yards freestyle in 31 seconds flat. Anne Hamilton led the field in synchronized figures with 82 points, 12 points better than her nearest competitor.

Six second places also were captured by the Red and White team. Sherrill Rand placed in the 50 yards breast stroke, Lorna Green in the 75 yards individual medley, and Rose Rochman in the 100 yards freestyle. Judy Barlow and Claire Tucker, swimming, the synchronized duet, were defeated by a most engaging pair of twin black cats from Queen's.

In the diving competition, Pauline McCullagh, with a score of 111.2, followed 4.7 points behind Toronto's winner, last year's champion, Jane Furness.

McGill's 200 yard freestyle relay team, composed of Mary Baillie, Lorna Green, Rose Rochman and Jane Walker, followed closely on the heels of Western's crack foursome. Jane, swimming the second lap, overtook Queen's and Toronto in an amazing burst of speed to secure second place for McGill.

POLOISTS BEAT CENTRAL YMCA

Ross Firth's McGill Redmen outscored the Central YMCA squad 11-8 in a wide open water polo game in the McGill pool last night. This was an exhibition tune-up to keep the Redmen in fighting trim for their impending clash with the University of Toronto.

George Drummond opened the scoring for Central 'Y', but that was the only time that they were in the lead. McGill forged ahead to take a 4-1 first quarter lead on two goals by Bernie 'Topper' Toporowski, and single markers by Gordon Phillips and Bill Manning.

Each team scored twice in the second quarter, leaving the half time score 6-3 for the Redmen. Phillips and Manning counted for McGill, while Donnie Mann garnered the two Central 'Y' markers.

Here is an example of how the companies in our Group, all wholly-owned subsidiaries of Canada Iron Foundries operate as a team. The two mechanical lift-span bridges over the Seaway Channel, within the Beauharnois Canal were fabricated and erected by Dominion Structural Steel Limited

... Electric Tamper & Equipment Co. of Canada Limited produced the electric motors... Railway & Power Engineering Corporation Limited supplied the control apparatus and the wire rope and we, the parent company, made the mechanical operating equipment.

Our companies are not so big that you could become buried and forgotten in a department. On the contrary, in The Canada Iron Group you have the opportunity to prove yourself and to take on responsibility.

We are men of vision; we plan for expansion and growth—our own and our country's. Look to wider horizons and worth-while opportunities with Canada Iron.
